

DECLARES COUNTY NOT FULLY COVERED BY NURSING SERVICE

Several Nurses Working in The County Address Meeting of Public Health Nurses

MEET IN COURT HOUSE

Dr. O. H. Strouse Advocates
Replacement of Health
Officers with Nurses

DOYLESTOWN, May 14—Miss Virginia Ellman, director of Public Health Nursing, Southeastern Chapter of the Pennsylvania Red Cross, at the annual meeting of Bucks County Public Health Nurses Association in the court house, yesterday, declared that Bucks County is still quite "uncovered." Miss Ellman told that bedside, school, and other nursing services are centralized in one portion of the county, and some sections have only one of the services.

Twenty-five nurses and health workers were in attendance at the meeting.

"There is plenty of work for everyone to do, so one agency will not be duplicated," said Mrs. John B. Chambers, Newtown, president of the organization, who stated that 16 graduate nurses do health work in the county.

"Most any family will put their trust in one friendly nurse, but will not place confidence in five different nurses who visit their home."

Miss Clara Johnson, Bristol, representing the state nurses, told that there are three state nurses in Bucks County, being located in Quakertown, Doylestown and Bristol. These do no bedside nursing she mentioned, but conduct chest, child health and baby clinics, in addition to doing school and orthopedic work.

Mrs. Ethel Northington, New Hope, mentioned the three full-time Red Cross nurses and one part-time nurse in the county. These are stationed in Doylestown, Morrisville, and Solebury-New Hope.

Miss Maude L. Wagner, Doylestown, mentioned that Red Cross and school nurses contact nearly 100 schools in the county.

It was brought out that the Emergency Child Health Community Workers in the county had their program started in 1934, under direction of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol, and the Bucks County Medical Society, aided by Mrs. Beatrice Penny, Quakertown; Mrs. Emily Wilcox, Morrisville; Mrs. Margaret Elliott, Bristol; Mrs. Catherine Hartman, Doylestown.

Mrs. Alice Simpson, Bristol, representing the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company nursing service, explained that her duties as a full-time nurse are becoming chiefly educational, where they formerly were bedside type.

County medical director, Dr. Otto H. Strouse, Perkasie, advocated that the county be divided into sections, so that the 16 registered health nurses have about two townships apiece to cover. He also advocated doing away with health officers, and replacing them with nurses.

"I would like to see the time when a census will be taken of all children in the county who have not been immunized for diphtheria," added Dr. Strouse.

A motion was made that the executive committee appoint the officers in the future, in lieu of same being elected.

Burlington Resident Is Bride of Bristol Man

The wedding of Miss Yolondo Perro, daughter of Mrs. P. Perro, Burlington, N. J., and Frank M. Rago, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Rago, 1102 Wood street, was solemnized this morning at 10:30 o'clock in St. Paul's Catholic Church, Burlington, N. J., with Rev. E. Sullivan officiating.

Miss Rose Rago, 1102 Wood street, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and the best man was Frank Angelina, 1106 Wood street.

The bride wore white sheer chiffon fashioned with a shirred bodice and long full skirt. With this was worn a bolero jacket with three-quarter length sleeves. She wore a tulle veil, finger-tip length, and it was attached to a crown of pearls and orange blossoms. Her long mitts were white lace, and slippers white satin, and she carried white roses.

The bridesmaid was attired in a dress of pink sheer chiffon fashioned like the bride's gown. An off-the-face blue chiffon hat trimmed with flowers and face veil, long lace mitts and slippers of the same tone, completed her costume, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Following the ceremony a dinner was served to members of the immediate families. Covers were laid for 50. Mr. and Mrs. Rago will leave this afternoon for New York City where they will spend a week. The bride will travel in a beige crepe dress trimmed with British tan, beige coat, and British tan accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Rago will reside at the home of the groom's parents.

Shultz Returned To Prison After Hearing

DOYLESTOWN, May 14—Harry Shultz, 38, Kintnersville, a candidate for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket in Bucks county last year, was returned to the Bucks County Prison yesterday following a hearing in a habeas corpus in which his attorneys sought to have him discharged for want of sufficient evidence.

Shultz was charged by six little girls living in the Perkasie, Sellersville and Upper Black Eddy sections, with improper solicitation. He has been in the Bucks County Prison since his arrest in default of $5,000 bail, being held for the May term of criminal court.

Yesterday, after hearing testimony, President Judge Hiram H. Keller ruled that four charges against Shultz did not come within the jurisdiction of the act and they were ordered dropped. Shultz, however, was held on two charges and bail was reduced from $5,000 to $2,000, in default of which, Shultz was again returned to the Bucks County Prison. His case is scheduled to go before the Grand Jury next week.

Judge Keller, in dropping four of the charges against Shultz, stated that he did not for a minute doubt the stories as told by the little girls whom Shultz had been bothering, but that in four instances the testimony was insufficient.

"Your conduct, however, Shultz, was very reprehensible," the Court remarked.

THREE HUSBANDS START ACTIONS FOR DIVORCE

Bristol Woman Named The
Respondent by Her Husband In Court Action

FOUR OTHERS SUE

A Bristol woman has been named the respondent in a libel in divorce filed by her husband. The action is being brought by Charles Earl Bigelow against his wife, Nora Bigelow, 259 Cleveland street.

They were married May 14, 1922, in Vladivostok, Russia. The address of the libellant is Newport Road, West Bristol. The separation is alleged to have taken place January 11, 1937.

Of the five actions in divorce, which were begun, three of the libellants were husbands and two were wives.

Esther M. Neindorff has filed an action in divorce against her husband, Henry L. Neindorff. According to the libel in divorce, they were married September 29, 1934, in East Rutherford, N. J., by a vicar, Rowland F. Nye. The address of the libellant is First avenue, Edgely, and that of the respondent 244 Wood street, Bristol. The separation is alleged to have taken place July 15, 1935.

Edwin D. Darrah has been named the respondent in a libel in divorce filed by his wife, Edith C. Darrah. They were married December 18, 1907, at Forest Grove. Both the libellant and respondent are residents of Langhorne, and the separation is alleged to have taken place May 2nd, 1936.

Jacob H. Frater has begun an action in divorce against his wife, Elsie H. Frater. According to the libel in divorce, the libellant and respondent were married February 9, 1927, in New York City. They resided together on West State street, Doylestown, until July 2nd, 1936, when, it is alleged, desertion took place. The address of the libellant and respondent is Doylestown.

Willard Benner has filed a libel in divorce against his wife, Bessie W. Benner, whom he married April 6, 1892, in Philadelphia. A resident of Pennsylvania for 56 years, the libellant gave his address as Pipersville, R. D. No. 1, in Tinticum township, and that of his wife as 112 North Orange Drive, Los Angeles, California. The separation is alleged to have taken place November 25, 1915.

All of the suits have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas, Doylestown.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamar A. Doan, Mrs. Charles Doan, Mrs. Elris Wright, and Miss Pauline Heller were Thursday visitors in Columbus, N. J.

Mrs. Richard D. Bowman is spending a week with Mr. and Mrs. Christopher A. Johnson. Mr. Bowman will spend the week-end at the Johnson home.

WOMEN GARDENERS HEAR INTERESTING ADDRESSES

Garden Section of County
Federation of Clubs Meet
At Bowman's Hill

AN ALL-DAY AFFAIR

NEW HOPE, May 14—With Mrs. Abram Ross, Mrs. Calvin S. Boyer, and Mrs. Craven as speakers, members of the Garden Sections of Bucks County Federation of Women's Clubs, gathered at the Bowman's Hill State Wild Flower Preserve, Washington Crossing Park, Tuesday.

A portion of the period was devoted to inspecting the plantings on the Mary K. Parry Educational Trail.

Mrs. Ross is chairman of the executive committee for the Preservation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Boyer is president of the county women's club federation. The addresses of the trio were eagerly listened to.

The morning meeting was presided over by Mrs. Earl Tomb, Bristol, reports being presented at that time. A decision was made to make permanent contributions in support of the preservation of the educational trail. It was thought that this feature should be a source of interest to surrounding schools and colleges wishing to take classes there for the study of wild flowers in their natural surroundings. Each planting is marked with the common name of the flowers on stones nearby.

It was announced that a new trail in memory of Dr. John Harsheberger, former professor of botany at the University of Pennsylvania, is under construction and it is hoped that this will be a State-wide affair claiming the interest of many women's clubs throughout Pennsylvania.

The educational Mary K. Parry Trail is now sponsored by 20 clubs of Bucks county, as follows: Bristol Travel Club, Buckingham Woman's Club, Bucks County Chapter, D. A. R., Chalfont Community Club, Countryside Gardeners, Doylestown Nature Club, Garden Club of Newtown, Langhorne Sorosis, Lingohocken Garden Club, Old York Road Garden Club, Quakertown Women's Club, Somerton Women's Club, Warrington Women's Club, Women's Club of Perkasie, Women's Club of Frankford, Women's Club of Southampton, Yardley Civic Club and Bryn Athyn Garden Club.

W. Wilson Heinisch, director of the preserve, gave a talk in the afternoon and pointed out interesting features on the trails.

BRISTOL ROTARIANS DEFY FRIDAY, 13TH, AND DINE AMID BLACK CATS, OPENED UMBRELLAS, AND WALK BENEATH LADDERS

Every conceivable superstition was openly flouted and scorned yesterday, Friday 13th, when the regular weekly meeting of the Rotary Club was held in the Elks' Home in place of the Thursday meeting. And in spite of the presence of five black cats, mirror breaking, and entering by one door and leaving by another, no casualties were reported to any member, either during the meeting or later in the day.

Otto Grupp, Jr., Croydon, and Ernest Gamble, Langhorne, were in charge of the program, the purpose of which was to relieve every member of any superstition that he had concerning Friday the 13th. Frank Voit, club president, presided. Club singing was enjoyed by the members.

Two tables of 13 men each were formed and every member had to sit at one of the tables sometime during the meeting. Live black cats were present in the room, one of which continued to howl throughout the meeting. Another realistic decoration was a skeleton dangling from a hangerman's noose in the center of the room.

Every member was forced to walk under two ladders on the tops of which were buckets of paint. Open umbrellas, hung upside down, decorated every table.

HOLD ONE WITHOUT BAIL; ANOTHER IN $7500 FOR 2 BRISTOL ROBBERIES

Philadelphia, May 14—James Darling, 32, and Joseph Baldwin, 40, both of this city, were held by Magistrate Nathan Beifer today for alleged liquor store robberies and several hold-ups, including raids on a liquor store and robbery of the Vandegrift Men's Shop, in Bristol.

Darling was held without bail and Baldwin in $7,500 bail for a further hearing May 24. Bristol police, Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo and Penna. Motor Police are checking with Philadelphia police on the robbery in that community. The two men were arrested in a chase on Roosevelt Boulevard here as they allegedly drove off with 42 cases of liquor stolen from a state liquor store.

$200,000 Fire at Wildwood

North Wildwood, N. J., May 14—Fire roared through the Chateau Monterey, a night club, early today, and destroyed an adjoining garage, a boat-house and an automobile, causing an estimated $200,000 damage. One policeman was hurt and several civilian fire fighters were burned. Many were endangered when a gasoline tank in the garage exploded. Seven residences were threatened by the flames.

Mussolini Criticizes America

Genoa, Italy, May 14—Mussolini in a speech today swore friendship to Chancellor Hitler and bitterly attacked the United States for anti-Italian utterances there. He warned the world that in any "ideological war" between Fascism and Democratic ideals the totalitarian states—Germany and Italy—would be found "marching together."

He promised that the former "streak front" against the Reich will never be revived. This promise reaffirmed once more the firmness with which the Rome-Berlin axis has been cemented between the two dictators.

Guardsmen To Join Search

Bradford, May 14—National Guardsmen today took command of the week-old hunt for missing four year old Marjory West, as most of the army of 1500 searchers began to abandon the task.

The one hundred fifty guardsmen were quartered in a nearby CCC camp upon their arrival, last night to aid in the search. The little girl disappeared last Sunday while picking flowers in the dense woods.

Legion Cadets To Leave Tomorrow For New York

The American Legion Cadets will leave Bristol tomorrow morning at nine o'clock to go by bus to Madison Square Garden, N. Y., where they will compete for championship honors for the eastern part of the United States. The cadets will have as their opponents 12 corps representing eight different states, all of them being champions or runners-up.

Bristol will be called to the starting line tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 and will be about the fifth in line of the competition.

The committee of the Corps today stated that it "would like to see a lot of Bristol people on hand to boost the Bristol corps as the other corps will be well represented by groups of supporters."

If the Cadets win this competition it will put them in line to compete at National Convention in Los Angeles in September. "Let's get behind them and boost as hard as possible," is the plea of the committee.

THREE WELL KNOWN IN SPORTS SPEAK HERE

"Eddie" Gottlieb, Harry Litwack and "Bill" Dallas
At K. of C. Affair

INTERESTING SPEECHES

At the fifth sports night affair of the season, the Knights of Columbus organization had "Eddie" Gottlieb, Harry Litwack, and "Bill" Dallas, as its guests. The affair was held in the Knights of Columbus meeting room last night.

Gottlieb is manager of the Sphas basketball team, several times champion of the American League, who lost the crown to the Jersey City Reds last season. Litwack is assistant basketball coach at Temple University and Dallas is a sports writer of a Philadelphia newspaper.

Gottlieb told the audience that he feels that the reason that his team did not win the championship this season was because it was "fed up" with victories and the desire to win was missing. He claimed that players do not care to fight for things after they win two or three times in a row.

He likened his Philadelphia Hebrew team to Connie Mack's championship baseball team of recent years which he scrapped. Gottlieb praised the A's manager for his deals and through his experience stated that it doesn't pay to keep a player on one team too long. Speaking of baseball, he mentioned that despite their material, the Boston Red Sox cannot win the pennant because they have no pep and the only player who has a fighting spirit is the manager, Joe Cronin.

"Spirit, pep and life, are the three assets of sports, and before I close I want to say that Bristol can afford to have good teams in sports, and there is nothing better than to see the boys of this town get a break in sports."

After his talk, Gottlieb answered questions brought forth by the fans, and it seemed that he thinks that basketball today is faster than in the days of the cage-games. When asked if he

Bucks Must Pay Land Damage On New Bridge

HARRISBURG, May 14—The Public Utility Commission yesterday refused to relieve Bucks County from payment of property damage incident to construction of a bridge carrying the Lincoln Highway over 15 tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad one-fourth of a mile east of Fallsington.

The county contended the improvement, which will replace an underpass, is part of a State Highway Department plan for reconstruction of the trunk highway and therefore the county should not be required to bear the condemnation costs.

LIST 78 CASES FOR TRIAL AT MAY TERM OF CRIMINAL COURT

Grand Jury To Be in Session
Beginning Monday Morning

18 DRUNKEN DRIVERS

15 Defendants Charged With Felony Entry, Larceny or Receiving Stolen Goods

With a total of 78 cases listed for trial at the May term of Bucks county criminal court which opens at Doylestown, Monday, with the Grand Jury in session for the first week, it looks as though court will continue through for two weeks.

The first week of trials by jury will not get under way until Monday, May 23rd, while the second week will start Tuesday, May 31, owing to Memorial Day being a holiday. This is the largest trial list in over a year and is due to 18 defendants charged with driving while drunk, a number of whom will enter pleas of guilty, and 15 defendants charged with either felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Several defendants are charged with operating gambling houses where horse race bets were placed and wagered. The famous Veterans of Hartford Club lottery and insurance case is also scheduled for trial with Earl R. Mason, of Easton, as one of the defendants.

One of the more important cases listed for trial is that of the Commonwealth against Harry E. Schultz, of Kintnersville, a former candidate for Sheriff on the Democratic ticket last Fall. Schultz is charged with five counts on serious charges brought by the parents of a number of small girls.

The complete list of new cases compiled by District Attorney Edward G. Blester and Assistant District Attorney Willard S. Curtin, is as follows:

SATURDAY, MAY 14, 1938

SANE MIND, SANE BODY

The educational system has come in the last few years to place so much emphasis on the necessity of specialized mental training to equip youth for the battle of life that there has been serious neglect of one of the most important factors of human growth and resource—development of the body.

Cultivation of the brain is essential to success, but without the balance of correct physical education intellectual superiority is without bottom. Howard Evans, headmaster of a famous school in Dover, England, expressed these views before groups of doctors and nurses privileged also to gaze upon nine of his pupils who had come to America on a tour to illustrate the importance of physical education.

The average American boy is superior in physical type to his British cousin, but both are far inferior to the boys of Italy, says Mr. Evans, who declares that unless Americans and Britons pay more attention to the body the race will deteriorate.

In the future, we shall probably be ashamed of our present-day ways. Some day he who loses his figure and develops a monstrous girth may be looked upon as a violator of the social code. Some kind of national movement to improve carriage, poise and physical perfection may be started to overcome the general air of listlessness found among adults. The man and woman of 40 and over can be just as physically fit as the boy of fourteen provided they get the right start in school and are convinced they must continue as they grow older.

Americans must be taught not only to think right, but to breathe and walk and exercise right if we are to take and maintain our place in the forefront of the peoples of the earth.

REFLEX ENDS

To suffer in silence is a Spartan ideal, a standard of perfection, continually striven for but never realized. Within the last few weeks school teachers have been forked to the griddle by their wisecracking pupils but the teachers refuse to be burned to a crisp, let alone suffer in silence. We have printed the students' blarney now we owe it to the teachers to let them have their say.

Their say was summed up at a meeting of the Co-operative School for Teachers in Bank Street (Greenwich Village) by a young woman who said no teacher can think in terms of the child without becoming childish. The teacher is one thing and the pupil is another. There must and will be discipline and the pupil must go the teacher's way, not the reverse.

The teachers are wearying of this sport of permitting the children to their charge to draw up a list of good and bad schoolmarm. It may be fun while it lasts, especially week-ends when school is out, but five days a week within the walls of the little, or big, red schoolhouse the teacher is boss, teaching the young idea many things besides how to shoot.

Traffic reform note: If you ride a bicycle on the sidewalks of Fresno, Cal., you must alight on approaching a pedestrian. You may bow or not bow, as you wish; the law doesn't go into that.

Good old-fashioned mud-slinging is not a political relic, as witness current events in Pennsylvania.

Sam Lewis for Lieut. Governor

SAM LEWIS

Sam Lewis offers with his candidacy a record of competent public service seldom excelled. As Auditor General, State Treasurer, and as Secretary of Highways his work was outstanding.

He was first to urge that the State Highways Department "dig the farmer out of the mud." It was he who built the farm-to-market road system. His construction and reconstruction of 13,562 miles of all types of highways in a period of four years broke the world's record.

Sam Lewis always has championed tax reduction. He was largely instrumental in having city and borough streets and county bridges joined to the state highway system, and township roads added for maintenance, reducing the tax burden on local communities.

He fought against diversion of the Motor Fund and increase in gasoline tax.

When he became Auditor General he had the legislature cut the appropriation of his Department more than a quarter-million dollars, and pruned expenses to meet the decrease. He made a corresponding saving in operation of the Treasury Department.

His hardest battle for the taxpayer was waged against the proposed $128,000,000 bond issues of 1928. The voters killed the bond issues and Sam Lewis proved his claim that the undertakings could be financed out of current revenues.

Sam Lewis is a self-made son of a pioneer family in a farming and industrial community, whose background gives him first-hand grasp of Pennsylvania's most important economic problems. He is President and General Manager of the York Fair.

A lawyer by profession, he is exceptionally well qualified to preside over the State Senate.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Pennsylvania's Dwindling Wood-File

(Prepared for The Bristol Courier by F. A. Pitkin, Executive Director, Pennsylvania State Planning Board)

In the day when William Penn, looking over the broad sylvan acres of his vast territorial grant, could foresee the time when all these forests could be destroyed by reckless waste he insisted upon the preserving of each fifth acre in its natural timber state. We have ample justification for his foresight. If the users of Pennsylvania's natural resources had followed Penn's wise counsel we could today easily rank first instead of twenty-second or worse among the states from the point of view of lumber output as we did in 1929. From an original patrimony of 28 million acres of the original "Penn's Woods" we have to date wiped out the greater part. Of the 13 million acres of timber land left, only six per cent remains covered with mature timber, half of which is second growth and the rest of very low quality. As late as 1890 Pennsylvania ranked among the first four states in lumber production. Today Pennsylvania is producing lumber for less than half of the wood products used in our own State. This is the one side of the tragedy of Pennsylvania's forests—resources which intelligent planning and conservation alone can restore to its former primacy.

The other side of the story is perhaps even less lovely. In the wake of this wholesale "timber mining" which has characterized the lumber industry policy of the State in the past are left two and one-half million acres of idle cleared land in addition to vast areas of cut-over forest lands which, without care, can yield only second-rate or scrub timber. Into this devastated area agriculture has tried to introduce a secondary source of maintenance to populations stranded by abandoned lumber camps and the wastes of stump-land. A great part of the land thus denuded has been found, at considerable public cost, to be wholly unsuitable for salvage in agricultural uses. A great part of it found its way to the auction block on the County Court House steps. In 1937, 550,000 acres of tax-delinquent farm land were sold to counties and 600,000 acres advertised for sale. Thus may be traced to the unguided rapacity of lumber barons a large portion of that one-fourth of State area described in studies of the State Planning Board as "Problem Areas."

This, however, does not complete the story of social loss and damage. From these denuded slopes of the Appalachians have coursed unimpeded flood streams to ravage the more populous valleys and cities below. It is important in this connection to bear in mind that doubling the velocity of run-off multiplies the cutting power by four, its power to carry soil by 32, and the size of particles, sixty-fourfold. Thus, the speed of drainage or run-off is of the greatest significance in soil erosion. By removing forest barricades lawless waters have been released to work their havoc on both the upland areas and upon the fertile plains below.

For all of this, solutions are at hand. It is not necessary to apply oppressive measures or to call for any serious abstinence or self-sacrifice. Work carried on by our forestry departments has amply demonstrated that more money can be made as a "going concern" out of the "cropping" of timber lands than out of "timber-mining." Thus, by the use of "selective logging" and the careful cropping of forest lands, we may not only increase a major source of income and employment to Pennsylvanians but also we shall be salvaging considerable areas useful for no other purpose and we shall be restoring the original beauty that delighted the eyes of William Penn and his associates.

EDGELY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Guthridge and sons Frank and Robert, Norristown, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Turner.

Mrs. William Bair spent Friday in New London, Chester County, where she attended the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. Frank Abcock. Mr. and Mrs. Bair were recent visitors of Mrs. Bair's mother, Mrs. Catherine Watterson, Coatesville.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Swain have moved into their newly furnished bungalow on Riverview avenue.

Mrs. P. Eckenroth is entertaining her cousin from Bloomsburg for several days.

Rev. Percy Crawford To Speak Here Monday Night

Monday evening, the Rev. Percy Crawford will be the guest speaker at a Lower Bucks County Pinebrook Spring Rally to be held in Mutual Aid Hall at eight o'clock.

With the Rev. Crawford will be the Young People's Church of the Air vocal quartet and brass quartet, both of which are well known to radio listeners and Pinebrook followers.

Rev. Crawford is known principally for his broadcast every Sunday over WIP from five to six o'clock. He is also founder of the Young People's Pinebrook Bible Conference held every summer in the Pocono Mountains near Stroudsburg and of Kings College to be opened this year at Belmar, N. J.

$4,000 "SUNBURN"

SOMERVILLE, Mass.—(INS)—A Somerville apartment house suffered a $4,000 "sunburn" when two glass sunbaths, focusing solar rays on a pile of inflammable material, caused a freak blaze.

"CONTRABAND" by Dennis Wheatley

SYNOPSIS

Gregory Sallust, young English private investigator, is greatly interested in the affairs of the beautiful Hungarian girl, Sabine Szentek, for two reasons: first, because her beauty and charm are irresistible; second, because she is associated with Lord Gavin Fortescue, a sinister, shadowy figure in international affairs. Fortescue is a strange looking little man, curiously misshapen. Sallust knows him by reputation and has begun to suspect that he and Sabine are concerned in certain illegal activities which Gregory is investigating for Sir Pellinore Gwaine-Cust, a British industrial giant. Gregory and Sabine have become friends, although she will tell him nothing of herself or her relations with Fortescue. In saving Inspector Wells of Scotland Yard from a brawl in a cafe near Deauville, France, where Sabine had lured the victim, Gregory gains possession of a mysterious coded telegram dropped during the fight. Sabine refuses to enlighten Gregory on the telegram, warning him it is dangerous to know too much. She agrees to spend the following day with the infuriated Gregory. Dining at a roadside inn, Sabine is filled with apprehension for Gregory's safety when she sees "The Limper," one of Lord Gavin's henchmen, watching them. Later, when Gregory goes to get his car, he is attacked by a man who throws pepper in his eyes. Sabine disappears. Returning to England Gregory's suspicions of Lord Gavin Fortescue are confirmed by Sir Pellinore and Gregory calls on Inspector Marrowfat of Scotland Yard to try to establish a working agreement with the police. Although Marrowfat tells Gregory there is no connection between Gregory's assignment and the matter the police are investigating, he orders Wells to shadow Gregory as he may lead them to something important. That same evening, with his servant, Rudd, Gregory flies to Calais, France. Later that night he and Rudd, pretending to be stranded with a broken-down car, sit drinking in a certain grimy "Cafe de la Cloche" mentioned in the mysterious telegram. About midnight they leave to trail five rough looking fellows who have been summoned from the cafe by the sound of a motor horn.

CHAPTER X

"Good lad," muttered Gregory to Rudd when they were finally clear of the cafe. "We managed that exit splendidly. Now, where's our curly-haired assassin got to?"

They could not see the man, but fifty yards down the road stood a car. Keeping in the shadows they made their way along the side of the cafe and then by a wide detour through an adjoining field until they came opposite the place where the car stood in the roadway.

Like the majority of French roads, there was no hedge separating it from the field, behind which they could shelter, but only a ditch, so they had to get down on their hands and knees and crawl the last twenty yards to avoid being seen against the skyline.

The car was a powerful limousine and "Corot" was standing by its doorway on the side nearest the ditch. A faint light lit the interior of the car and Gregory smiled in the darkness as he recognized the small hunched figure on the back seat. Then he caught his breath, for beyond Lord Gavin sat Sabine looking even more beautiful than his memory of her. He grasped Rudd's arm and pressed it.

"Take a good look at the old boy," he whispered. "That's the fellow we're after, Lord Gavin Fortescue, doesn't he, but he probably deserves the kick at the end of a rope more than any man in Europe. Think you'd know him again?"

"Sure thing, sir," Rudd whispered back. "Looks like a monkey on a stick ter me, but he's got a distinguished sort of dial I will say. And ain't his girl friend a bit of orl-right?"

Lord Gavin was talking in a quick low voice to "Corot." The watchers could not catch his words but they saw him pass over a sheaf of papers. The handsome knife thrower touched his checked cap then closed the car door and it was driven away at a high speed towards Boulogne.

For a second Gregory considered attacking the thing for the purpose of seizing the papers he had just received from Lord Gavin, but the chances were that if they set on him, his shouts would bring his four friends tumbling out of the cafe before they could master him and get away. In any case, Gregory decided, more valuable information would probably be obtained by remaining under cover for the time being and following the man to see where he went.

"Corot" returned at once to the cafe, but only to poke his head inside the door.

A moment later, the four others joined him outside and as the whole party set off together up the road Gregory saw that all five of them were now carrying things that looked like fat cylinders or oil drums slung across their backs.

He gave them a few minutes' start, then followed. It was easy to keep the group in view as the road switched-backed towards the rising ground and on each low crest they stood out plainly silhouetted against the starlit sky. After a mile they left the main road and took a track leading in the direction of the coast. Along this Gregory and Rudd had more difficulty in keeping sight of them as it wound in and out among the dips and hillocks of the deserted dunes.

No lights were to be seen in any direction and Gregory knew that they were now well inside that desolate wind-swept triangle, entirely lacking in roads and villages, which lies between the three points, Boulogne, Calais and Cape Gris Nez.

A good two miles were covered, then the Frenchmen turned in the direction of Boulogne again, leaving the track now to trudge over the short coarse grass.

Twice Gregory lost his quarry for a moment but on each occasion he managed to pick them up again because, all unsuspecting, they were laughing and talking as they walked and their voices carried clearly through the still warm night.

They had long since left behind the last twinkling lights of Calais Town. It was over an hour since they had left the inn and in all that time they had not passed a single farmhouse, or seen a human being. The slopes began to rise more steeply and Gregory realized that they were moving towards the high ground which dominates that uninhabited area and is known as Mount Couple.

The group in front suddenly fell silent and must have turned off in a new direction, for Gregory lost the shadowy blur of their moving figures in the semi-darkness for the third time, and now, although he chanced discovery by trotting forward a hundred yards he failed to regain touch with them.

Cursing his ill luck he stumbled up a low mound and, pulling his night glasses from his raincoat pocket, began to scan the surrounding country. For ten minutes or more, with Rudd beside him, he swept the darkened downs, first in one direction then in another without success, until he suddenly caught sight of a faint glow which had just appeared a quarter of a mile away, throwing the line of the next ridge up into sharp relief. Instantly they set off towards it.

As they advanced the silvery glow grew perceptibly brighter, throwing all the surrounding country into a heavier darkness. Half way up the ridge Gregory suddenly slipped to his knees, pulling Rudd down beside him. From that point they wriggled up the last hundred yards on their stomachs.

Below them stretched a broad shallow dip in the very center of the high ground they had been traversing. The men they had followed had already set up two of their cylinders, from which there now hissed bright acetylene burners, and were busy with a third at the far end of the valley bottom. Soon they had completed their work and had all five flares going, spaced at irregular intervals but marking out a fiery T at one end of a fine stretch of level grassy land hidden from any casual observer beyond its ring of encircling hills.

Suddenly Gregory pricked up his ears. He had caught the hum of an airplane overhead. A moment later the noise ceased and a big bomber passed low overhead, outlined in black silhouette against the starry sky; then, sinking rapidly, came to land over the flares, taking its wind direction from their formation.

Its pilot taxied it toward the farther slope, and there the five men met it; but Gregory's attention was taken from it momentarily by the sound of another plane coming up from a different quarter. It circled slowly overhead, came down into the wind, and taxied up alongside the first arrival.

For the next quarter of an hour plane after plane arrived, a little more than minute intervals, but Gregory's eyes were now riveted on the activities of the men on the ground. Their number had increased to half a hundred and these had not landed from any of the planes. They were emerging from a shadowy patch at the far side of the valley, and all carried cases or bales on their shoulders, which they were busily loading into the earliest airplanes to arrive at this secret depot.

At first Gregory was puzzled as to where the men with supplies were coming from. There were no roads or tracks within a couple of miles of this lonely spot and so they could not have been brought by car or truck and no dumps were to be seen, although the men kept disappearing into the shadows in an irregular chain to return each time carrying a fresh load of cargo for the waiting fleet.

Touching Rudd on the arm, he began to crawl stealthily along the crest of the ridge, keeping just within the belt of shadow, until he could get a better view of the place from which this chain of supplies continued to make its mysterious appearance. After covering two hundred yards he was able to view the proceedings from a new angle, and noticed what looked like a black slit in the seaward slope of the natural basin below them. It must be, he guessed, the entrance to an underground passage, leading down through the old chalk caves to one of the little fishing villages, Sandgatt or Wissant on the coast, a mile or so away.

Rudd could restrain his curiosity no longer.

"What's the game, sir?" he asked in a hoarse whisper.

"Smugglers, my boy," said Gregory grimly. "For the last two years this outfit has been costing Britain half a million pounds a month in revenue, but there's more to it than that. These birds are out to wreck the old firm of J. Bull, Home, Dominions and Colonial, unless we can stop 'em. D'you feel like running a marathon?"

"Orders is orders and got to be obeyed," said Mr. Rudd.

"Come on then," Gregory drew back into the deeper shadows and stood up. "We're going to run now, run as we've never run in our lives. We've got to be in the air again before Gavin Fortescue's fleet starts on its way to England."

Dear Son:

We welcome you and Helen back from your honeymoon. After you've settled a bit we'll drop in to see your new home

I remember the day, some thirty years ago, when your Mother and I came back to our first home. I split kindling for the cast-iron kitchen stove, and it took Mother all afternoon to bake some bread. Instead of her vacuum-cleaner, Mother had a broom . . . and how she made it fly. But our prize possession was in the parlor . . . a real talking-machine, with chubby cylinder-records and a big morning-glory horn.

We used to march for miles all over town on our shopping trips. How I fidgeted while Mother shopped. We were both worn out.

Things have changed a lot since then, all right — and you'll both be better off for it. Helen won't have to spend half her days in the kitchen like Mother used to. The advertisements in the daily newspaper will save her those punishing miles of shopping. They'll keep her posted on current values, give her the names of dependable products, tell her all about special sales. When you come home nights you'll find her fresh as a daisy . . . ready for a jolly evening with your friends.

I'll trade the "good old days" for the good NEW days any day.

But enough of reminiscence . . . I rejoice in the exciting years of youth that are ahead for you both.

Affectionately,

Dad

HOWARD I. JAMES

Representative in Congress (Vote for One) 9th District

|--|---|
| Charles L. Gerlach, Lehigh County | X |

CHARLES L. GERLACH

Representative in General Assembly (Vote for Two)

|--|---|
| Wilson L. Yeakel, Perkasie Borough | X |
| Thomas B. Stockham, Morrisville Borough | X |

WILSON L. YEAKEL

THOMAS B. STOCKHAM

Mr. Gerlach, engaged in business at Allentown, Pa., candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress, has had long, varied and practical experience in business and industry to qualify him for representing the district at this time when the restoration of employment is so important in steps to make jobs and restore prosperity. As an employer of labor he is well acquainted with the Federal, State and local problems that confront legislators.

Few men in Bucks County are so well qualified as Howard I. James, of Bristol, candidate for the Republican nomination for State Senator, to understand the important questions which will confront him if elected to represent Bucks County in the Legislature. In his years of experience as a lawyer and as a banker he has been called upon to study the legal aspects of business, industry and banking, and has also had practical experience along these varied lines.

By his ability, energy and accomplishments as a member of the Legislature Mr. Yeakel has proved his worth to the constituents whom he is asking to continue him as their Representative.

Mr. Yeakel's long experience as a legislator and the unblemished record he had made for conscientious service, as well as his loyalty to the principles of his party make it particularly logical that he be returned to Harrisburg for another term.

His experience as a member of the Legislature has made Mr. Stockham a valued representative of the people of Bucks County in that body to which he hopes to be re-elected.

Mr. Stockham's record, the success of which depended in no small measure to his wide experience as a business man and his activity in civic affairs for many years, assures Bucks countians of intelligent and honest representation.

Few elections have ever been more important than this one will be to our distressed State in this critical time in the world history. The New Deal policies of President Roosevelt with their staggering taxation, wasteful extravagance, excessive borrowing proposals for remaking our form of government—destructive alike to our economic solvency and constitutional security, are in the judgment of many, leading the country rapidly toward national destruction.

With a similar New Deal government at Harrisburg, in deadly factional warfare over spoils of office; with disclosures of irregularities of a shocking character in the conduct of the same, it behooves the Republican electors to give earnest and intelligent consideration to the persons seeking the nominations for the various National and State offices at the Republican Primary Election on May 17, next.

THE ABOVE CANDIDATES BELIEVE IN

1. The policies of the Republican party as developed in the past seventy-five years, which policies reflected in legislation, have made us the greatest nation on earth, and our State, when undisturbed, a reservoir for opportunity for labor, for agriculture and for business.
2. Retention of business and industry in Pennsylvania with attendant expansion to relieve unemployment and assure labor constant work at good wages; open markets for the farmer and promotion of individual initiative.
3. Efficiency and economy in Government, instead of waste and extravagance.
4. Constructive legislation instead of costly experiments that "spawn oppressive taxation."
5. Reaffirmation of the principle of local Government and "restoration of the sovereignty of our State."
6. Providing ample relief for the unemployed, needy mothers, the aged and blind and taking administration of relief from the field of politics.

Read The Records of These Candidates and Be Convinced That as the Standard-Bearers of the Republican Party They Will Smash the Democratic Earle-Lawrence Machine Which in Four Years in Harrisburg Has Doubled Taxes Decreased Employment by Driving Industry Elsewhere and Prostituted State Governmental Functions to Political Purposes.

Intends to keep his same lineup for next season, Gottlieb said that he was undecided but he still feels that his club is the best in the American League.

"Bill" Dallas thought that the reason that the Spas did not win the championship was because they played in spurts and they did not judge the scoring power of their opponents. Dallas thought that the case game was faster than modern basketball and said that today a 12-point margin with two minutes to play is not as safe as in the olden days when a one-point lead with two minutes to go was considered quite safe.

Dallas said that if Philadelphia had enough balls to accommodate case-basketball the game would not have died out the way it did.

"The biggest assets to basketball today are the coaching and equipment," stated Dallas. "Today players are getting the benefit of expert coaching. Some of them, like Nat Holman of New York City College, have made the game a scientific study."

"The reason why Temple won the national championship was because they had five players, each of whom specialized in his own field." This remark came from Harry Litwack, assistant coach at the Cherry and White institute. He then went on to mention the different players and what each was more adapted to.

Litwack claimed that although Max Polonek was not a high scorer in any game, the reason why the Spas won the championship in 1935 was because Polonek had the ability to always get the ball off the backboard on missed throws. This is Don Henderson's job in the Temple team.

Arthur Brady presided as toastmaster.

Another indication of the growing interest of state authorities in promoting co-operation between the producer and consumer, is seen in New York State's vigorous campaign to sell more than 3,000,000 bushels of apples.

The campaign, outlined at a state-wide conference at Albany, got under way March 26th. The apple-raising industry contributes approximately $13,500,000 to the farm income of the state and those three million bushels in storage constitute a real emergency.

State authorities recognize that the investment represented by these apples seriously curtails purchasing power of the farmers, which in turn seriously affects industrial employment in New York State.

The big apple push is undertaking to stimulate the market for this healthful food commodity. The 1937 apple crop was the largest in years, but somehow the value of this fruit was eclipsed this year by the popularity of the citrus fruits.

UP THE LADDER FROM MINE MULE BOY TO JUDGE

Son of a Welsh miner, but born in Plymouth, Pa., Arthur James went to work in the mines before dawn, picking slate, driving mules, to help support his family.

Under lamplight, in a tiny mining cottage, Arthur James struggled for education, aided by his mother, a former Welsh school teacher.

Working his way through Dickinson College, graduating with honors, Arthur James was chosen District Attorney of Luzerne County where he made a great record, being re-elected by a big majority.

ARTHUR H. JAMES, eminent jurist, now Republican candidate for the nomination for governor, is another of Pennsylvania's distinguished sons who rose from poverty and struggle to success and renown. The word "fight" has been the biggest in his life. Prof. Edwin Scott, Judge Arthur H. James, Republican Candidate for Governor, rose from mule boy and slate picker in the mines to Judge of the Superior Court of Pennsylvania.

Red-heads must fight. Taunted about the color of his hair, Arthur James fought so well he was threatened with expulsion from school. The fighting spirit has been his ever since.

Elected Lieutenant Governor in 1927, he presided over Senate deliberations for two years, winning praise for his fairness.

who as a young teacher taught James in Plymouth High School, recalls that when he first took the job he had been advised to expel James. "But the pugnacious little red-head had the stuff, and I wouldn't fire a boy like that out of school," he said later. "The world is full of the other kind." Later at college, as the smallest student in his class, he knocked out in succession three of a group of fifteen who had raided a class dinner. After graduation, he turned from fighting human adversaries to fighting for principles.

Spinach Salad

One envelope plain unflavored gelatin; one-half cup cold water; one-half cup hot water; three-fourths cup cooked spinach; one tablespoon lemon juice; one-half teaspoon salt; three hard-cooked eggs.

Pour water in bowl and sprinkle gelatin on top of water. Add hot water in a few minutes and stir until dissolved. Add lemon juice, salt and spinach. Cool. Rinse mold in cold water and line with boiled eggs, cut in firm slices. Turn in the gelatin mixture when it has started to thicken. Chill until firm. Serve with crisp greens and mayonnaise.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Moore, 327 Monroe street, returned Wednesday after five days' trip to Detroit, Mich., where they attended the celebration of the diamond jubilee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. They enjoyed sightseeing trips through the city and vicinity, and a trip to Windsor, Can.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Suspenders are upholding Hollywood's best fashion traditions. They are youthful, dashing and closely related to the ever-beloved jumper dress. They are as good for the high noon as they are for high noon and the cinema girls endorse them heartily.

Kay Francis has matching suspenders on a slim grey skirt with which she wears a red turtleneck sweater, a jacket to match the skirt and a high-crowned, wide-brimmed felt hat. With her reputation as a fashion-setter it wouldn't be surprising if the suspender would soon become an integral part of every tailor's.

In the Warner Bros. picture, "Men Are Such Fools," Priscilla Lane wears an azure blue jersey skirt with self-fabric suspenders fastened to the dress with dull silver links similar to cuff buttons. A softly striped tub silk shirt, with cuffs caught up by similar links completes the charming spectator's sports costume.

Some of these suspenders in the mode are the exact copies of the kind men wear. Others show more imagination, such as the "H" shaped and embroidered Tyrolean type or those that start out as a "Y" in front of the dress but end up as an "X" in back.

Carole Landis injects novelty into the idea in a wood violet skirt of heavy silk crepe. With this she wears a tailored white silk blouse with patch breast pockets made with two narrow horizontal slits through which suspenders matching the skirt are slipped to hold them in place. Joan Blondell has a floor length skirt of black tulle with which she wears silver suspenders studded with rhinestones over a short-sleeved white satin blouse.

Jumpers modeled on dirndl lines are also achieving a place for themselves in the pre-summer wardrobes. Many of these are bright cotton prints coupled with white voile or organdy blouses with brief puffed sleeves. Often times the straps emerge from a long corselet waistline.

The monotone jumper suits with matching Eton jackets but brightly contrasting blouses are not only chic but should be a standby in every wardrobe. Susan Hayward has one of these in a heavy saddle tan shantung with which she wears all tan accessories but gets plenty of "lift" in a brilliantly striped linen blouse. Of course, she can also alternate with other accessories.

GRAND

Baring the life of women convicts, their frustrated loves and hopes, the cruel caste system that governs them behind bars, Columbia's "Women in Prison" will make its local bow today at the Grand Theatre.

The film's major roles are delineated by such seasonal troupers as Wyn Cahoon, Scott Colton, Arthur Loft, Mayo Methot and Sadah Padden. Lambert Hillier directed from a screen play by Saul Elkins of Mortimer Braun's original story.

Another stirring chapter in showmanship history has been written by David O. Selznick with his technicolor production of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer," due to open Sunday at the Grand Theatre.

Here was a story property, Mark Twain's best beloved and most well-known work, that was a definite challenge to the resourcefulness of any producer.

Selznick had to do more than simply make another picture out of the rich material which the book offered; he had to invest the production with the flavor of up-to-the-minute commercial showmanship.

His first ten-strike in bringing a modern touch to "Tom Sawyer" was the nation-wide talent hunt for an unknown boy to play Tom.

Overnight Tom Sawyer became a vital, living personality, sharing the front-page news with the Oriental and European war news, labor developments and the doings of Congress. That was showmanship of a superb kind.

BRISTOL

A thrilling action drama which features the introduction of three tuneless songs is Monogram's exciting "Port of Missing Girls," which opens today at the Bristol Theatre.

It concerns the adventures of Della, a night club singer, who is accidentally implicated in a murder, and who escapes from the police by hiding on the boat of mysterious Captain Storm. The ship sails immediately for the Orient, where Della, whose life up to now has been anything but dull, finds herself virtually a prisoner in "Minnie's Joint," somewhere in Shanghai, and involved in another murder plot—this one to do away with Captain Storm and all hands, on the high seas.

The sinister connection between girls who want thrills and men who want loot is made the subject of a bold screen attack in "Tip-Off Girls," Paramount's drama of the highway hijacking racket, which will have its first local showing Sunday at the Bristol Theatre.

For its daring expose of this racket, which last year took an estimated fifty million dollars in tribute from American industry, Paramount selected a cast of experienced dramatic players. Heading the cast is Lloyd Nolan, who has the Hollywood distinction of having been such a successful screen villain that the fans demanded the studio make a hero out of him. He played important roles in "The Plainsman" and "Wells Fargo" and made his biggest hit as the half-mad potentate in the South Seas Technicolor production, "Ebb Tide." After a successful "trial run" as a "straight" character in "Dangerous to Know," Nolan now appears as a young G-man who almost single-handedly breaks up the country's worst band of highway racketeers.

ERRORS AID NEWTOWN TO DOWN BENSALEM

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 14.—Three bad errors in the sixth inning in which Newtown garnered four runs, sent coach George Reimer's Bensalem Owls back to the club house licking the wounds of their fifth consecutive beating and kept themselves from gaining a tie for fourth place as a result. Newtown added another run in the seventh, and this together with the one they scored in the second, gave them a final total of 6 to Bensalem's 2.

ODD FELLOWS NO MATCH FOR ST. ANN'S TEAM

The Odd Fellows were no match for the St. Ann's A. A. team last night on Grundy's diamond as the Saints made fourteen hits to score an easy 15-2 triumph. It was the second straight victory for the Wood streeters.

The St. Ann's team counted two runs in the first and then came back strong in the second and third to chalk up a quintet of markers in both frames. Hal Snyder and Milt Jones took the bombardment of hits, Snyder being driven out of the box in the second.

Bill Dougherty, Hughes, Choma and DeLia had two safe hits each to lead the winners while Gile Dougherty scored four times, getting on base via an error, pass, and two safe blows. The winners played errorless ball.

The St. Ann's moundman was "Snake" Whyne who loosened up after his mates gave up a 7-0 lead in the second and allowed two runs, thanks to a triple by "Johnny" Dick. Four of the losers' five hits came in this canto.

BUCKINGHAM TIES NEW HOPE

NEW HOPE, May 14.—Coming from behind with a three run rally in the sixth, Buckingham High's Buccaneers gained a first place tie with New Hope here yesterday afternoon as a result of their 6-3 win over the home team in an upper division tilt of the Lower Bucks County League.

FALLSINGTON, May 14.—Southampton High outslugged Fallsington to down the Falcons, 15-8, in an upper division tilt of the Lower Bucks County League played here yesterday afternoon.

ROSE SHUTS OUT CARDS; MORRISVILLE TAKES LEAD

MORRISVILLE, May 14.—Bristol High's Cardinal and Gray nine learned that it takes hits and runs to win ball games ordinarily, as they were shut out by John Ross of Morrisville in a lower division tilt in the Bucco League, 1-0. And what's more, then ace of the Bulldogs' mound stag gave them exactly one hit over the seven inning stretch, passed only two and struck out 16 Cardinal hitters, including the entire side in both the second and third frames.

The tilt, as the score indicates, was a typical hurler's duel as has been exhibited in nearly all of the games played to date in the lower division of the Bucco circuit. It was southpaw Vance Betz on the hill for coach Juenger in a surprise move. However, the Cardinal portside, who had never been action before today's game, fooled everyone with his brilliant pitching against the league's leading slugging team. Betz had the mighty Bulldog swatters puzzled all afternoon with his speed ball and fine hook. He whiffed six and held the home team to exactly 3 hits, which were widely scattered, one coming in each of the first, third and sixth frames. But it was the last blow that did the damage.

It was delivered by Jim Yeager, yesterday it was a single but it came with Red Reitzle on second with one out and counted the burly Bulldog receiver with the winning tally—the only run of the game.

RACERS CONGREGATE AT LANGHORNE SPEEDWAY

LANGHORNE, May 14.—Daring auto race drivers from all parts of the United States are concentrated here today for preliminary practice runs and hot-stove predictions as to what they expect to do tomorrow, when Langhorne Speedway becomes the converging point of thousands of fans and nearly half a hundred drivers.

Over 100 miles of "motor insanity" is booked tomorrow on the Langhorne track with what is claimed by Promoter Ralph Hankinson and many AAA officials as "the best balanced card" in history.

Temperamental stars who ask big appearance money and then fall down on the racing job, have been left out of the petrol dole and the contenders will be in their fighting for the purse money and will have to come in from the front ranks at some time or other during the six events to get any greenbacks for their pocketbooks.

Sunday entrants are Ted Horn, Bert Ross, Chet Gardner, Al Flemington, Frankie Bailey, Vern Orenduff, Tony Willman, Jack Moon, Bob Sall, Frank Moore, Henri Guerand, Johnnie Matera, Bud Henderson, Red Redmond, Doc Keim, Milt Marlon, Deacon Litz, Duke Nalon, Church Tabor, Harry Sheeler, Honey Purick, Walt Ader, Mike Bailey, Gus Zarka, Bill Meinke, Al Apen, Red Hongland, Al Chisick, Charlie Breslin, Bill Fox, Frank Reynolds, Tommie Tomlinson, Walt Buckman and Lee Wallace.

Time trials will start at 12:01 p. m., with the first of four ten mile races.

due to get under way at three p. m., daylight time. The feature final, 18 starters to qualify, will be for 50 miles.

Highly favored to get the victory flag are Horn, victor at Reading in April; Bob Sall, winner at Hohokus May 1, Tony Willman, Chet Gardner and Duke Nalon, with Gus Zarka and Red Redmond, the sentimental nominees.

ROHM & HAAS VICTORS OVER GRUNDY NINE

The Rohm and Haas nine kept in step with the St. Ann's team in leading the Bristol Twilight League as it emerged victor in its game with the William H. Grundy Company team on the chemical mixers' field. Final count of the tilt was 6-2.

Three-base hits started Mel Wright on the road to ruin. Mel pulled himself out of a jam in the second by fanning Gilbert with two on base, but in the following frame, "Gile" Ritter lined a triple to right and when Johnny Dougherty got three bags on his hit to left, it was the beginning of the end for Wright before the session was over. Sullivan, Brunner and Bill Ritter also got hits and four runs were over. Wright finished the game.

Manager Andy Pfaffenrath was taking no chances on losing the game after his club built the comfortable lead and when he saw Gilbert slipping in the Grundy fifth, he yanked him in favor of Eddie Jefferies. In the fourth, Grundy had scored on a hit by Antonelli and three bagger by DiTanna. At the start of the fifth, Capriotti and Kervick hit safely and Wright walked and at this point, Jefferies came in. got Earl Jefferies on a sacrifice and struck out both DiBlassio and Muffett.

The Grundy team again failed in its bidding, committing four errors while the winners had one. It was the second straight loss for the woolen makers.

Monday night, St. Ann's plays Grundy's on the Grundy diamond and Rohm and Haas plays the Odd Fellows at Edgely.
